

Principle Courses for Master Degree

Name & Code	Contents
CYH-1010 Histological and histochemical technique	Different methods of preparing histological and histochemical slides for the purpose of studying the number, size, shape, and composition of cells and their various components under all natural conditions.
CYH-1011 General Histology	To study the cell as a structural and functional unit of different body tissues as well as its microscopic structure as a natural entry point to study the composition of its different parts in part, consequently; understand the nature and specific function of each part of the cell alone and as well as a single group in the service of the tissue, organ, or body as a whole.